The future trajectory of river condition on the North Fork includes a continuation of channel contraction, fining of surficial material, and loss of channel complexity. Project Alternatives are expected to have a negligible effect on this trajectory compared to the Future Conditions baseline.